New Models for Ecosystem Dynamics and Restoration Richard J. Hobbs, Katharine N. Suding, Peter Society for Ecological Restoration International, 2013-03-19 As scientific understanding about ecological processes has grown the idea that ecosystem dynamics are complex nonlinear and often unpredictable has gained prominence Of particular importance is the idea that rather than following an inevitable progression toward an ultimate endpoint some ecosystems may occur in a number of states depending on past and present ecological conditions The emerging idea of restoration thresholds also enables scientists to recognize when ecological systems are likely to recover on their own and when active restoration efforts are needed Conceptual models based on alternative stable states and restoration thresholds can help inform restoration efforts New Models for Ecosystem Dynamics and Restoration brings together leading experts from around the world to explore how conceptual models of ecosystem dynamics can be applied to the recovery of degraded systems and how recent advances in our understanding of ecosystem and landscape dynamics can be translated into conceptual and practical frameworks for restoration In the first part of the book background chapters present and discuss the basic concepts and models and explore the implications of new scientific research on restoration practice The second part considers the dynamics and restoration of different ecosystems ranging from arid lands to grasslands woodlands and savannahs to forests and wetlands to production landscapes A summary chapter by the editors discusses the implications of theory and practice of the ideas described in preceding chapters New Models for Ecosystem Dynamics and Restoration aims to widen the scope and increase the application of threshold models by critiquing their application in a wide range of ecosystem types It will also help scientists and restorationists correctly diagnose ecosystem damage identify restoration thresholds and develop corrective methodologies that can overcome such thresholds Food Webs at the Landscape Level Gary A. there are differences in diets of Canada and Lesser Snow Geese in the area of sympatry I documented annual variation for all and spatial variation for some reproductive parameters measured Results of between area comparisons of reproductive performance tended to suggest that in some years Canada Geese nesting in the area of sympatry contribute little towards the maintenance of the island segment of this population During incubation when females were on nests male behavior varied as a function of year area time of day and incubation stage Overall male Canada Geese allocated their time primarily to vigilance feeding and resting when females were on the nest Males in the area of allopatry were more vigilant and fed less compared to males in the area of sympatry When females were on the nest their behavior varied relative to time of day incubation stage and temperature Females in the area of allopatry were more vigilant than females in the area of sympatry but overall females on the nest allocated their time primarily to resting and maintenance Recess behavior of Canada Geese varied relative to sex incubation stage and temperature but not area though pairs in the area of allopatry tended to spend more time alert and less time feeding compared to pairs in the area of sympatry During recesses males allocated their time primarily to vigilance whereas females allocated nearly equal proportions of time to feeding and maintenance Overall brood rearing behavior varied relative to year area time of day sex age class days since peak hatch brood size brood density and temperature Overall results are indicative of exploitation competition and I suggest that present foraging conditions are insufficient to meet the energetic demands of breeding Canada Geese as well as breeding and staging Lesser Snow Geese molt migrant Giant Canada Geese and staging Atlantic Brant Such an energy deficit is particularly detrimental to the growth and development of Canada Goose goslings resulting in locally poor recruitment which presumably will lead to a much depressed breeding population of Canada Geese on Akimiski Island Abstract shortened by UMI Canadian Journal of Botany, 2006-10 Arctic, Antarctic, and Alpine Research, 2005 Herbivore Optimization by North American Elk Kelley Merlet Stewart, 2006 Understanding herbivore optimization has implications for theories underpinning ecosystem processes management of large herbivores and the landscapes they inhabit We designed an experiment to examine interactions related to density dependence of North American elk Cervus elaphus and resulting plant responses to herbivory in the Blue Mountains of Oregon USA from 1999 to 2001 Page 1 Écoscience, 2006 Catastrophic Vegetation Dynamics and Soil Degradation in Semi-arid Grazing Systems Max Rietkerk, 1998 Cum laude graduation with distinction Effects of Climate Variability on Sub-Arctic Marine Ecosystems, 2007 The Emu, 2009 Terrestrial Vertebrates of Tidal Marshes Russell Greenberg, 2006 Collection of twenty papers presented at a symposium held in October 2002 at the Patuxent National Wildlife Research Center Patuxent Maryland Birdlife of the Churchill Region Joseph R.
