GENERAL SERVICE

TIRES

INFLATION PRESSURE should be checked every month when tires are cold. If one or more tires are consistently lower than others, look for a puncture or slow leak. Inflation pressure should be checked before the car has been driven any considerable distance, that is, before the tires get warm. Tires should be at atmospheric temperature when they are inflated. Remember that inflation pressure will drop or raise approximately one pound per square inch (or 4%) with each ten degrees fall or rise in atmospheric temperature.

All Models except Station Wagon and Sedan Delivery

	TIRE SIZE	INFLATION PRESSURE—(PSI)
Standard	7.10-15	24
Optional at Extra Cost	7.60-15	22 front 20 rear

Station Wagon and Sedan Delivery

Standard	7.10-15 (6 ply)	28 front 30 rear
----------	-----------------	---------------------

Do not bleed air to reduce pressure when tires are warm.

You can get the most from your tires by keeping them inflated to the recommended pressures when cold. Actual tests show that 30% under-inflation reduced tire life by one-half. Likewise, over-inflation reduces tire life and decreases comfort and safety. However, do not bleed air from tires when they are warm or hot even though the gauge reading is higher than the recommendation, since this could lead to under-inflation.
