Free Trade Agreements And Access To Medicines Need For Regulation:

Free Trade Agreements and Access to Medicines Manoranjan Ayilyath, 2013 TRIPS Agreement was entered into by WTO members as a means to create a unified Intellectual Property regime across the world. The provisions of TRIPS act as a minimum standard which has to be followed by the member countries. TRIPS provisions had forced the developing and least developed countries to create and follow an IP regime which was not suitable for their technology and needs. One of the severe impacts of following such a regime was on the public health sector. Before TRIPS came into being a large number of countries had refused to grant patents for pharmaceutical products and even if the same was granted the countries provided for a flexible compulsory licensing procedure enabling the growth of generic drug industries thus allowing the manufacture of essential drugs at a cheaper cost. This flexibility was taken away by the TRIPS agreement which hampered the capability of the developing and least developed countries to provide for an effective public healthcare system. This disparity led to the Doha Declaration and WTO Para 6 decision in 2003 allowing more flexible provisions regarding compulsory licensing and thereby to some extent resolving the issues. While these measures were being adopted which were lauded by organs of UN and WHO the developed countries went on with TRIPS plus provisions in their countries. Recent years have shown the world a new trend amongst the developed countries wherein they through the Free Trade Agreements (FTAs) with the developing countries impose TRIPS Plus Intellectual Property Standards. The Regional Trade Agreements (RTAs) and Bilateral Trade Agreements envisaged under GATT Agreement had been negotiated mainly for favourable tariff rates and lower customs barriers in the initial stage acting as an exception for the MFN Rule. But recently as mentioned earlier these Agreements are including within them Intellectual Property chapters involving TRIPS Plus provisions. Unlike the GATT and GATS Agreements TRIPS Agreement does not include any provisions which exempt the application of MFN principle for the Intellectual Property provisions in FTAs. Thus the inclusion of IP chapters in these FTAs results in an increase of the Intellectual Property standards prevailing around the globe. This practice is defeating all the efforts taken by the developing countries including India in Doha to ensure access to medicines for the people of the developing countries and least developed countries (LDCs) and is nullifying the flexibilities under Doha Declaration. If such a policy is allowed to be followed the flexibilities and the safeguards under TRIPS will remain as a mere scarecrow and in near future itself the TRIPS will lose its significance. The

This book centres on women living with HIV in South Africa who have navigated affective relationships, activist networks, government institutions and global coalitions to transform health policies that govern access to HIV medicines. Drawing on 20 years of ethnographic and policy research in South Africa, Brazil and India, it highlights the value of understanding the embodied and political dimensions of health policy and reveals the networked threads that weave women's precarity into the governance of technologies and the technologies of governance It illuminates the entwined histories of health policy evolution systemic inequality and everyday life and calls for a recognition of the embodied ramifications of democratic politics and global health governance By integrating medical anthropology with science studies and political theory this book traces the history of the struggle to access HIV medicines in the Global South and brings it into the present by articulating the lessons learned by activists and policy makers engaged in shaping these vital health policies Research Fundamentals Mr. Rohit Manglik,2023-06-23 Introduces research principles including hypothesis formulation data collection and analysis Covers experimental and non experimental methods for scientific inquiry Intellectual Property & Free Trade Agreements Christopher Heath,Anselm Kamperman Sanders,2007-12 This book deals with the important topic of the implications of free trade agreements for the international framework of intellectual property law Advancing the Human Right to Health José M.
