

EXPECTANCY AND EMOTIONS

CHAPTER 1- INTRODUCTION

AIM: we intend to show:

1 how the capacity for anticipatory representations broadens the human emotional repertoire

2 the usefulness of belief-goal analysis of emotions for doing justice to the complexity of human emotional experience, and for identifying important differences among emotions which belong to the same general family.

Although belief-goal analyses already exist in some form for several emotions, much work is still needed for identifying the distinguishing features of each of them. In our view, this task is best accomplished by an approach that focuses on families of related emotions, comparing them with their similar and understanding better its implications in terms of motivations and actual behaviour. Furthermore it can help account for possible transformations from one emotion to another.

Anticipated emotions(emotions that are object of anticipatory representations) and their motivational effect on goal-directed behaviour, have recently remarkable interest in the decision theory. In contrast we intend to analyse the whole spectrum of anticipation-based emotions. Is necessary to distinguish anticipated emotions,anticipatory emotions (those implying the anticipatory representation of some desired or undesired events) and invalidation-based emotions (those elicited by the invalidation of some anticipatory representation). We aim at providing a detailed analysis of specific, discrete anticipatory emotions, as well as of invalidation-based emotions. We will focus on full-blown anticipation-based emotions and their cognitive and motivational components (although also briefly considering core affective states and their impact on cognitive processes).

The basic concern of decision-making theories is to ascertain how helpful or harmful anticipatory emotions can be for making good decisions. By contrast, we do not make "cognitive" coincide with "rational", in that we consider emotions as already implying cognitive elements such as beliefs and goals.
