Abstract

The United Nations remains the principal international governmental organisation for promoting human rights. However, serious concerns focus on persistent compliance gaps between human rights standards and domestic practice. In response and against a backdrop of growing regime complexity, United Nations human rights agencies have increasingly sought to bypass states by coordinating new forms of non-state and private authority. International Relations scholarship has captured this governance arrangement using the concept of orchestration, defined as when an international organisation enlists and supports intermediary actors to address target actors in pursuit of international governmental organisation governance goals. This article explores the implications of an orchestration topology for human rights governance by analysing national human rights institutions in the context of an established global human rights regime and its dedicated orchestrator: the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. I use the experience of national human rights institutions to further refine the concepts of managing versus bypassing states to capture how networked intermediaries are affected by, and respond to, new opportunities within international governmental organisation structures. The article identifies the conditions under which orchestration may be particularly well-suited to a human rights governance function. It further examines the analytical limitations of this mode of influence for addressing a multi-level compliance gap, as well as what the analysis means for international organisations and understanding orchestration more generally.

Global Human Rights Institutions Global Human Rights Institutions:

Global Human Rights Institutions Gerd Oberleitner, 2013-04-30 The range of global human rights institutions which have been created over the past half century is a remarkable achievement Yet their establishment and proliferation raises important questions Why do states create such institutions and what do they want them to achieve Does this differ from what the institutions themselves seek to accomplish Are global human rights institutions effective remedies for violations of human dignity or temples for the performance of stale bureaucratic rituals What happens to human rights when they are being framed in global institutions This book is an introduction to global human rights institutions and to the challenges and paradoxes of institutionalizing human rights Drawing on international legal scholarship and international relations literature it examines UN institutions with a human rights mandate the process of mainstreaming human rights international courts which adjudicate human rights and non governmental human rights organizations In mapping the ever more complex network of global human rights institutions it asks what these institutions are and what they are for It critically assesses and appraises the ways in which global institutions bureaucratize human rights and reflects on how this process is changing our perception of human rights Global Human Rights Institutions Gerd Oberleitner, 2007-12-03 Drawing on international legal scholarship and relations literature this title is an introduction to global human rights institutions and to the challenges and paradoxes of institutionalizing human rights Global Human Rights Law Collection: Documents, pt. 1, 1999

Regional Protection of Human Rights Dinah Shelton, 2008 This book examines the role that human rights plays in the development of regional organizations It looks at the question of what human rights obligations states assume upon joining regional bodies and how regional concern with human rights intersects with the global system elaborated in the context of the United Nations Health and Human Rights, 1996 Chains of Justice Sonia Cardenas, 2014-04-02 Sonia Cardenas offers the most comprehensive account to date of the emergence of national human rights institutions exploring why states create these institutions and examining their impact on contemporary human rights struggles Exploring International Human Rights Rhonda L. Callaway, Julie Harrelson-Stephens, 2007 Presenting a range of philosophical debates policy analyses and first hand accounts this text offers a comprehensive set of readings on the major themes and issues in the field of international human rights Human Rights, State Compliance, and Social Change Ryan Goodman, Thomas Pegram, 2011-11-14 National Human Rights Institutions NHRIs human rights commissions and ombudsmen have gained recognition as a possible missing link in the transmission and implementation of international human rights norms at the domestic level They are also increasingly accepted as important participants in global and regional forums where international norms are produced By collecting innovative work from experts spanning international law political science sociology and human rights practice this book critically examines the significance of this relatively new class of organizations It focuses in particular on the prospects of these institutions to effectuate state compliance and social change Consideration is given to the role of NHRIs in delegitimizing though sometimes legitimizing governments poor human rights records and in mobilizing though sometimes demobilizing civil society actors The volume underscores the broader implications of such cross cutting research for scholarship and practice in the fields of human rights and global affairs in general The Human Rights Encyclopedia: Issues and individuals James R.
