

Chapter 10: Models for Processing and the Understanding Process

Education 1980

2. Knowledge Base

1. What are the 10 key propositional processes?

1. Processing the sentence.
2. Processing context in all cases and in all conditions.
3. Representational structure is continuous flow, not independent blocks.
4. Spoken and written propositional processes are different.
5. This needs to be noted separately. All patterns have exceptions.
6. An individual brings into the system the knowledge of the rules that the teacher uses.
7. Subjects and teachers operate spontaneously. The system and possible subjects make it intelligible.
8. In oral conditions, the spontaneous system will select those rules that are most appropriate for the situation with which they are faced as natural and useful.
9. The oral system grows continuously and flexibly. It can know that an utterance is a request, a question, and provide a response, sometimes with explanations.
10. It is more than grammar or syntax alone. It includes those of subjects and teachers negotiating relationships for understanding as they go along for a time period of time.
11. Two things that help facilitate understanding processes are relationships and relationships.
12. Two sources are being processed: one is a more parallel process, a subject's input, or the relationship, or a parallel source available.
