Introduction to Climate Change Management John C. Shideler, Jean Hetzel, 2021 This book provides climate students with the basic scientific background to climate change management. Students will learn about international and national approaches to climate change management defined in voluntary initiatives as well as in national law and international agreements. The book describes mitigation and adaptation measures, monitoring and reporting of greenhouse gas emissions and strategies for achieving a low carbon economy including green finance. This book combines theory and practice, introducing students to the conceptual background but also taking a professional and technical approach with case studies and low carbon toolkits. Filled with didactic elements such as concept schemes, tables, charts, figures, examples, as well as questions and answers at the end of the chapters, this book aims to engage critical thinking and the discussion of important topics of our days. The low carbon strategy is one of the answers to limiting the greenhouse effect on our planet. This strategy is to minimize the overall carbon consumption in the life cycle of the products we consume, from the extraction of raw materials to the end of their life. The future is being built today. This book will guide its readers along the path of imagining and realizing a low carbon economy.

Governing Low-carbon Development and the Economy Hidenori Niizawa, Tōru Morotomi, 2014 Based on results of the first phase of the Kyoto Protocol which requires participating industrial countries to limit their carbon emissions, this book recommends creating a global regulatory regime that would set emission targets for all nations. The authors argue that once these targets and the policies for meeting them are established, countries will be spurred to develop lower carbon producing economies. The book discusses experiences in Japan, primarily along with results from collaborative research between Japan and the Republic of Korea, and comparative studies between Japan and Germany. The chapters adopt different perspectives, looking at the issue from the discipline of economics as well as a more sociological, neo-institutionalist viewpoint.

Publisher's description

Innovation for a Low Carbon Economy Tim Foxon, Jonathan Köhler, Christine Oughton, 2008 This book shows that although innovations in energy systems represent a core contribution to achieving national and international energy policy goals, theoretical approaches to understanding innovation differ radically between separate disciplinary perspectives. The need for greater mutual learning between these approaches is met within this study as international academics from economic, institutional, and management backgrounds share and analyse their respective approaches, knowledge, and insights.
