

FRANCIS NEWMAN

- Francis Newman (1805-1897) was an English classical scholar and moral philosopher. he wrote "Homeric Translation in Theory and Practice" a reply to Matthew Arnold.
- "He says that my work will not take rank as the standard translation of Homer, but other translations will be made:— as if I thought otherwise!"
- "I have set the example of the right direction in which translators ought to aim, of course those who follow me will improve upon me and supersede me."
- "If any English reader, after perusing my version of four or five eminently noble passages of sufficient length, side by side with those of other translators, and (better still) with a prose version also, finds in them high qualities which I have destroyed, I am foremost to advise him to shut my book."

The Library of Literary Criticism of English and American Authors: 1730-1784 Charles Wells Moulton, 1902 The Translator as Writer Susan Bassnett, Peter Bush, 2007-11-15 Over the last two decades interest in translation around the world has increased beyond any predictions International bestseller lists now contain large numbers of translated works and writers from Latin America Africa India and China have joined the lists of eminent bestselling European writers and those from the global English speaking world Despite this translators tend to be invisible as are the processes they follow and the strategies they employ when translating The Translator as Writer bridges the divide between those who study translation and those who produce translations through essays written by well known translators talking about their own work as distinctive creative literary practice The book emphasises this creativity arguing that translators are effectively writers or rewriters who produce works that can be read and enjoyed by an entirely new audience The aim of the book is to give a proper prominence to the role of translators and in so doing to move attention back to the act of translating away from more abstract speculation about what translation might involve The Library of Literary Criticism of English and American Authors Charles Wells Moulton, 1901 The Library of Literary Criticism of English and American Authors: 680-1638 Charles Wells Moulton, 1901

Library of Literary Criticism of English and American Authors Charles Wells Moulton, 1910 Anglophone Indian Women Writers, 1870-1920 Ellen Brinks, 2016-04-15 The result of extensive archival recovery work Ellen Brinks's study fills a significant gap in our understanding of women's literary history of the South Asian subcontinent under colonialism and of Indian women's contributions and responses to developing cultural and political nationalism As Brinks shows the invisibility of Anglophone Indian women writers cannot be explained simply as a matter of colonial marginalization or as a function of dominant theoretical approaches that reduce Indian women to the status of figures or tropes The received narrative that British imperialism in India was perpetuated with little cultural contact between the colonizers and the colonized population is complicated by writers such as Toru Dutt Krupabai Satthianadhan Pandita Ramabai Cornelia Sorabji and Sarojini Naidu All five women found large audiences for their literary works in India and in Great Britain and all five were also deeply rooted in and connected to both South Asian and Western cultures Their works created new zones of cultural contact and exchange that challenge postcolonial theory's tendencies towards abstract notions of the colonized women as passive and of English as a de facto instrument of cultural domination Brinks's close readings of these texts suggest new ways of reading a range of issues central to postcolonial studies the relationship of colonized women to the metropolitan literary culture Indian and English women's separate and joint engagements in reformist and nationalist struggles the translatability of culture the articulation strategies and complex negotiations of self identification of Anglophone Indian women writers and the significance and place of cultural difference English Translators of Homer Simeon Underwood, 1998 This book is an account of English translations of Homer set in the context of modern translation

Austin Allibone,1874 Publishing the Woman Writer in England, 1670-1750 Leah Orr,2023 Based on a survey of nearly seven hundred works with female authors from this period this book contends that authorship was constructed not always by the author for market appeal that biography often supported an authorial persona rooted in the genre of the work and that authorship was a role rather than an identity Translation and the Classic Paul F. Bandia,James Hadley,Siobhán McElduff,2024-02-08 Through a range of accessible and innovative chapters dealing with a spectrum of genres authors and periods this volume seeks to examine the complex relationship between translation and the classic and how translation makes and remakes and sometimes invents classic works for new audiences across space and time Translation and the Classic is the first volume in a two volume series examining how classic works fare in translation how translation is different when it engages with classic texts and how classic texts can be shaped understood in new ways or even created through the process of translation Although other collections have covered some of this territory they have done so in partial ways or with a focus on Greek Roman and Arabic texts or translations This collection alone takes the reader from 1000 BCE up to the digital age in a sequence of chapters that encompass areas including philosophy children s literature and pseudotranslation It asks us to consider translation not just as a mechanism of distribution but as one of the primary ways that the classic is created and understood by multiple audiences This book is essential reading for those taking Translation Studies courses at the senior undergraduate and postgraduate level as well as courses outside Translation Studies such as Comparative Literature and Literary Studies
