Environmental Politics And Liberation In Contemporary Africa Environment Policy:

Environmental Politics and Liberation in Contemporary Africa Mohamed Salih, 1999-03-31 Nowadays the environment looms large in the analysis of conflict in developing societies and the precise role it plays is the subject of an ongoing debate. The debate has moved on from the earlier but still popular notions of power struggles, class struggles and ethnic conflicts to a perception of conflict as the product of intense group competition for resources. Where the state controls the distribution of resources itself inevitably becomes party to conflicts whose bone of contention is access to state power as the most efficient means of gaining access to resources. The resources in question are social health, education, transportation, communication, recreation etc. and material land, water, housing, jobs, contracts, licenses, permits etc. In parts of the world and especially in Africa, diminishing resources and authoritarian state rule exacerbate group competition leading to political confrontation. This is the line I have followed in analysing conflict in the Horn of Africa. Markakis 1987 1998. Mohamed Salih's first contribution in this volume is to move the debate a step beyond this line which can be criticized as unduly materialist. He does it by bringing culture into the realm of resources not only as a resource in itself but also as the agency that assigns natural resources their value. Culture thus becomes a contextual element in conflict over resources whose value is culturally determined.

The Handbook of Environmental Voluntary Agreements Edoardo Croci, 2005-10-06 EDOARDO CROCI IFEF Universit Bocconi Milano Italy Voluntary approaches in environmental policy represent a third wave of regulation in the environmental field. Command and control was the first wave. Its core is based on uniform emission standards, the respect of which needs to be enforced through extensive monitoring and severe sanctions. The expected cost of sanction for non-compliance calculated as its amount multiplied for the probability to be caught must be superior to the benefits of non compliance in order to let the sanction be effective As the benefits of non compliance can vary among firms sanctions need to be very high in order to be effective In fact sanctions are ordinary correlated to environmental damage and not to the benefits of non compliance But very high sanctions can be difficult to enforce as they appear unfair and can lead to dramatic consequences on firms and workers up to shut downs of plants Ambient standards reduce these problems but oblige the regulator to know a huge amount of information regarding the specific contribution of each polluter to the polluted body Information is difficult to obtain because of asymmetric information and costly to produce because it requires large and skilled regulating and enforcing organizations Nevertheless complex regulation is the base of any environmental policy framework as it allows the policy maker to fully exercise its power of composition of various interests in a relatively transparent way Economic instruments were the second wave

Coping with Water Deficiency Phoebe

Koundouri,2007-11-28 Research results discussed in this book demonstrate that effective water management tools and decision making practices are needed to support interventions to increase availability and manage demand for scarce water supplies Furthermore the book bridges the gap between ideas and actions endorsed in the research oriented environmental debate and their translation into policymaking structures and programs in developed and developing countries

Institutional Dynamics in Environmental Governance Bas Arts,Pieter Leroy,2006-09-09 Environmental policy in its broadest context has been significantly revitalized and renewed during the last two decades That observation is nothing new attested to by the number of publications conferences and both private and public projects that have been initiated However our understanding of the dynamics of this renewal has generally been informed by studies on single policies and projects leaving us with a limited understanding of what the newness consists of in terms of an integrated perspective This book presents fresh analyses of a number of well known cases but does so from one comprehensive view the so called policy arrangement approach Cases discussed range over organic farming integrated water management nature policy cultural heritage policy integrated region oriented policy corporate environmental management and target group policy always in search of the commonality of experience and conclusions to be drawn in understanding the past and in formulating future perspectives

Implementing the Environmental Protection Regime for the Antarctic D. Vidas,2012-12-06 When the Protocol on Environmental Protection to the Antarctic Treaty entered into force on 14 January 1998 a new phase commenced for the Antarctic Treaty System The parties to the Protocol are today confronting issues related to the implementation of a complex international environmental protection regime both in international and domestic contexts Several crucial implementation questions need to be solved in order to enhance and make possible the implementation of the Protocol What would be the consequences for the parties of a possible failure in resolving the pending implementation issues on what premises can the solutions be based and what then are the options available This book provides a systematic overview of the implementation issues in sections on jurisdiction control and enforcement in the Antarctic Part I institutional support to the implementation of the Protocol Part II normative support to the implementation of the Protocol an Antarctic liability regime Part III relationship with other international instruments and arrangements Part IV and through a series of selected case studies issues involved in domestic implementation of the Protocol Part V This is a book that will appeal to Antarctic specialists and to all those interested in environmental law and policy

An Institutional Basis for Environmental Stewardship D.A. Fuchs, 2013-03-09 What is the role of government in environmental politics and policy The answer to this question used to be relatively clear Government was to regulate the environmental performance of state and non state actors to set standards impose charges and establish more or less stringent criteria of acceptable behavior With the increasing appearance of the issues of globalization and global governance in the political science literature however the focus has turned to the role of non state actors Academic research and the popular debate have identified business non governmental organizations NGOs and civil society as such as increasingly important and potentially powerful actors in the political arena At the same time some observers have proclaimed the influence of government to be declining Others have argued that the role of government primarily is changing rather than declining Those who adopt the latter perspective postulate that the new role for government in this changing political and socio economic context is to set the framework for action In this perspective government is still of fundamental importance for the functioning of the society the economy and political decision making but its role is different in that government merely provides the institutional framework facilitating desired outcomes

Greening Society P.J. Driessen, P. Glasbergen, 2013-04-17 This book can be regarded as a monograph on the debates and developments in Dutch environmental policy It has been written with a specific perspective in mind First and foremost the line of approach we have taken was from a multidisciplinary social science point of view The trend in environmental policy is looked at from the angle of sociology policy studies and political science Secondly all analyses depart from the paradigm shift concept This particular paradigm shift is based on the fact that a radical change has taken shape over the years in the way environmental issues are handled Previously environmental policy had always been characterised by a top down approach in which government determined the actual objectives of policy and assumed that it could win over business non governmental organisations and citizens to act in line with those objectives There was also a great deal of faith in the technical solutions to environmental issues Today's environmental policy is based on a totally different philosophy Environmental objectives are now reached in association with business non governmental organisations and citizens These actors are also involved in bringing environmental policy into practice In other words the implementation of policy has a more interactive nature New relationships emerge between government the market and civil society and policy discourses also become integrated The environmental interest is more often weighed against the economic interests the spatial development and against social justice

Salih,2000-06-30 Social and natural scientists are currently obsessed with globalization but this has not been matched by an equal interest in the societal consequences of local environmental change Attention has thus been withdrawn from community and locality and transferred to global processes with an indifference to the reality of those at the receiving end of the social economic and political problems that globalization create Local reality is obscured and conditions are imposed that are often insensitive to or even distort local needs resource management and production systems The case studies presented here illustrate how environmental degradation has contributed to the distortion of local institutions and economies thus denying local communities the right to live in a productive and healthy environment The contributors highlight the seriousness of the difficulties involved in conflating national policies and local reality and imposing global policy instruments on local communities Understandably the case studies demonstrate that local communities resist putting their faith in environmental policies and plans imposed on them by global or national institutions that often deprive them of access to and control over their local environment The Assertion of Rights to Agro-pastoral Land in North Cameroon Ruth
