Global Perspectives On Technology Transfer And Commercialization Building Innovative Ecosystems:

Global Perspectives on Technology Transfer and Commercialization John Sibley Butler, David V. Gibson, 2011-01-01 As we move further into the 21st century increasing emphasis is being placed on the importance of technology transfer Through new research and practices scholars practitioners and policymakers have made great strides in broadening our understanding and ability to implement technology transfer and commercialization processes The fruit of that research is collected in this timely volume Technology transfer is a dynamic area of study that examines traditional topics such as intellectual property management the management of risk market identification the role of public and private labs and the role of universities This volume reflects on how government business and academia influence technology transfer in different countries and how the infrastructure of a country enhances technology and contributes to each country's overall economy Interpreting and adopting the processes of technology transfer and commercialization or building innovative ecosystems is critical to seeing success in this digital age Those leading the surge toward building innovative ecosystems for technology transfer are the fellows of the Institute for Innovation Creativity and Capital IC2 Institute at The University of Texas at Austin Global in its scope of solving market economy problems for this volume the Institute has focused its lens on accelerated knowledge based development Here scholars from 13 countries come together to critique technology transfer from each of their respective nations The results of their contributions lend innovative insight to exactly how different nations are working to maximize technology transfer and commercialization in uncertain times Those with an interest in commercialization and technology transfer from students to scholars practitioners to policymakers will find this important collection of great value

Technology and Industrial Parks in Emerging Countries Andrés Rodríguez-Pose, Daniel Hardy, 2014-06-16 Industrial and technology parks are commonly regarded as a policy panacea They tend to be considered as the ideal instrument to alleviate an assortment of institutional political economic social and ultimately technological weaknesses and often form the centrepiece of development strategies Yet the real impact of industrial and technology parks especially in emerging countries is still poorly understood Focusing on examples from Latin America Asia Africa and the Middle East the book represents a first approach to understand the potential and reality of industrial and technology parks in emerging countries It is argued that although some parks have been successful in addressing a range of key problems including underdevelopment unemployment and a lack of investment the majority have failed to deliver rendering the promise of many parks little more than a pipedream

Innovacities: impact of regional innovation systems on the competitive strategies of cities Scheel Mayenberger, Carlos, Pineda S, Leonardo, 2017-09-29 The term innovation has been a concept excessively manipulated by government leaders important businessmen academicians consultants and journalists trying to sell a motive to those who want or need a change whether they are accustomed to buying products in an exaggerated way with no other purpose than supporting consumer habits or to those who practically do not need them We have observed in innumerable cases of world stature that innovation is prompted by the desire to enter and remain in economies of marked consumer capitalism and in all these cases it has been noted that if the entrepreneurs companies cities regions or countries are not ready to promote and support innovation in a socially inclusive and democratic fashion these efforts are useless and only superficial changes not administered to democratize in any true depth are achieved
