

COOLING SYSTEM

The tractor cooling system, which operates on the thermo-siphon principle, does not use a thermostat or water pump. As the engine warms up, the coolant is heated, expands, and circulates through the engine block and cylinder head, to the radiator where the coolant temperature is lowered before again circulating through the engine.

The cooling system operates under pressure which is controlled by a regulating valve built into the radiator cap. To maintain pressure in the system be sure all connections are tight, there are no leaks in the system, the radiator cap is in good condition and tightened to the stop, and the radiator gasket surface is clean and smooth. If the radiator cap regulating valve is faulty, replace the cap with a new one of the same type.

ADDING COOLANT TO THE COOLING SYSTEM

- "A" Radiator cap.
 "B" Filler cap gasket.
 "C" Filler neck.
 "D" Upper water tank.
 "E" Overflow pipe.

Water level in pressure-cooled radiator.

CAUTION! A thermo-siphon system has coolant at the boiling point during normal operation. Remove the radiator cap only when the engine is cool to avoid the possibility of severe burns or scalding.

When the tractor is cool, turn the radiator cap slowly counterclockwise to the pressure release point to allow residual pressure to escape; then press down on the cap and continue to turn until the cap is free to be removed.

Fill the radiator slowly to approximately 2-inches (51 mm) below the top of filler neck. Due to expansion, when the system becomes hot, any excess water will be discharged through the overflow pipe.

Before replacing the filler cap, be sure to remove any chaff or dirt particles which may be on the gasket surface of cap, and tighten the cap clockwise to the stop.

NOTE: Do not use chemical mixtures to stop radiator leaks. Have the radiator repaired.

DRAINING THE COOLING SYSTEM

- 1 - Radiator filler cap
 2 - Engine inlet elbow
 3 - Drain plug
