Field and Hedgerow Annotated John Richard Jefferies, 2021-05-26 Field and Hedgerow is novel by John Richard Jefferies published in 1889

Field and Hedgerow Richard Jefferies, 2017-06-11 John Richard Jefferies 1848 1887 is best known for his prolific and sensitive writing on natural history rural life and agriculture in late Victorian England However a closer examination of his career reveals a many-sided author who was something of an enigma To some people he is more familiar as the author of the children's classic Bevis or the strange futuristic fantasy After London while he also has some reputation as a mystic worthy of serious study Since his death his books have enjoyed intermittent spells of popularity but today he is unknown to the greater part of the reading public Jefferies however has been an inspiration to a number of more prominent writers and W.H. Hudson Edward Thomas Henry Williamson and John Fowles are among those who have acknowledged their debt to him In my view his greatest achievement lies in his expression aesthetically and spiritually of the human encounter with the natural world something that became almost an obsession for him in his last years He was born at Coate in the north Wiltshire countryside now on the outskirts of Swindon where his family farmed a smallholding of about forty acres His father was a thoughtful man with a passionate love of nature but was unsuccessful as a farmer with the result that the later years of Jefferies childhood were spent in a household increasingly threatened by poverty There were also it seems other tensions in the family Richard's mother who had been brought up in London never settled into a life in the country and the portrait of her as Mrs Iden usually regarded as an accurate one in his last novel Amaryllis at the Fair is anything but flattering Remarks made in some of Jefferies childhood letters to his aunt also strongly suggest an absence of mutual affection and understanding between mother and son A combination of an unsettled home life and an early romantic desire for adventure led him at the age of sixteen to leave home with the intention of traversing Europe as far as Moscow In this escapade he was accompanied by a cousin but the journey was abandoned soon after they reached France On their return to England they attempted to board a ship for the United States but this plan also came to nothing when they found themselves without sufficient money to pay for food A self absorbed and independent youth Jefferies spent much of his time walking through the countryside around Coate and along the wide chalk expanses of the Marlborough Downs He regularly visited Burderop woods and Liddington Hill near his home and on longer trips explored Savernake Forest and the stretch of the downs to the east where the famous white horse is engraved in the hillside above Uffington His favourite haunt was Liddington Hill a height crowned with an ancient fort commanding superb views of the north Wiltshire plain and the downs It was on the summit of Liddington at the age of about eighteen as he relates in The Story of My Heart that his unusual sensitivity to nature began to induce in him a powerful inner awakening a desire for a larger existence or reality which he termed soul life Wherever he went in the countryside he found himself in awe of the beauty and tranquillity of the natural world not only the trees flowers and animals but also the sun the stars and the entire cosmos seemed to him to be filled with an inexpressible sense of magic and meaning the son of a farmer From early in life he showed a great love of the countryside but was temperamentally unsuited to follow his father as a farmer and in 1866 he found employment as a newspaper reporter for the North Wiltshire Herald and the Swindon Advertiser His birthplace and home is a museum open to the public In late 1877 with Jessie and their baby son Harold he moved to Surbiton close to the Surrey London boundary to be nearer the hub of literary England The Surbiton years were momentous The couple s next child a daughter called Jessie after her mother but known by her second name Phyllis was born and Jefferies began to make his name at last His new surroundings defined him both to himself and others as a country writer

HOURS OF SPRINGIt is sweet on awaking in the early morn to listen to the small bird singing on the tree No sound of voice or flute is like to the bird s song there is something in it distinct and separate from all other notes The throat of woman gives forth a more perfect music and the organ is the glory of man s soul The bird upon the tree utters the meaning of the wind a voice of the grass and wild flower words of the green leaf they speak through that slender tone Sweetness of dew and rifts of sunshine the dark hawthorn touched with breadths of open bud the odour of the air the colour of the daffodil all that is delicious and beloved of spring time are expressed in his song Genius is nature and his lay like the sap in the bough from which he sings rises without thought Nor is it necessary that it should be a song a few short notes in the sharp spring morning are sufficient to stir the heart But yesterday the least of them all came to a bough by my window and in his call I heard the sweet briar wind rushing over the young grass Refulgent fall the golden rays of the sun a minute only the clouds cover him and the hedge is dark The bloom of the gorse is shut like a book but it is there a few hours of warmth and the covers will fall open The meadow is bare but in a little while the heart shaped celandine leaves will come in their accustomed place On the pollard willows the long wands are yellow ruddy in the passing gleam of sunshine the first colour of spring appears in their bark The delicious wind rushes among them and they bow and rise it touches the top of the dark pine that looks in the sun the same now as in summer it lifts and swings the arching trail of bramble it dries and crumbles the earth in its fingers the hedge sparrow s feathers are fluttered as he sings on the bush I wonder to myself how they can all get on without me how they manage bird and flower without me to keep the calendar for them For I noted it so carefully and lovingly day by day the seed leaves on the mounds in the sheltered places that come so early the pushing up of the young grass the succulent dandelion the coltsfoot on the heavy thick clods the trodden chickweed despised at the foot of the gate post so common and small and yet so dear to me Every blade of grass was mine as though I had planted it separately They were all my pets as the roses the lover of his garden tends so faithfully All the grasses of the meadow were my pets I loved them all and perhaps that was why I never had a pet never cultivated a flower never kept a caged bird or any creature Why keep pets when every wild free hawk that passed overhead in the air was mine I joyed in his swift careless flight in the throw of his pinions in his rush over the elms and miles of woodland it was happiness to see his unchecked life What more beautiful than the sweep and curve of his going through the azure sky These were my pets and all the grass
