

- Connect battery charge cable clamp with black handle to the negative (-) battery terminal (Figure 8).
- Start engine. Let the engine run while battery recharges.
- When battery has charged, shut down engine.

NOTE: Use an automotive hydrometer to test battery state of charge and condition. Follow the hydrometer manufacturer's instructions carefully. Generally, a battery is considered to be at 100% state of charge when specific gravity of its fluid (as measured by hydrometer) is 1.260 or higher.

COLD WEATHER OPERATION

Under certain weather conditions (temperatures below 40°F [4°C] and a high dew point), your generator may experience icing of the carburetor and/or the crankcase breather system.

In an emergency, use the original shipping box as a temporary shelter:

- Cut off all flaps.
- Cut out one of the long sides of the box to expose exhaust side of unit. Ensure a minimum of two feet clearance between open side of box and nearest object.
- Cut appropriate slots to access receptacles of unit.
- Start unit, then place box over it.

IMPORTANT: Remove shelter when temperature is above 40°F [4°C].

For a more permanent shelter, build a structure that will enclose three sides and the top of the generator:

- Make sure entire muffler-side of generator is exposed. Note that your generator may appear different from that shown in Figure 9.

- Ensure a minimum of two feet clearance between open side of box and nearest object.
- Face exposed end away from wind and elements.
- Enclosure should hold enough heat created by the generator to prevent problems.

CAUTION! Never run unit indoors. Do Not enclose generator any more than shown.

RECEPTACLES

120 Volt AC, 15 Amp Receptacles

Each of these outlets is protected against overload by 15 Amp push-to-reset type circuit breakers (Figure 10).

Use each outlet to operate 120 Volt, 60 Hz, single phase loads requiring 1,800 (1.8 kW) watts at 15 Amps of current.
